Basic knowledge in theories of education or socialization

Applicants should demonstrate foundational understanding of key theories of education, learning, and socialization within pedagogy, sociology, psychology, or related disciplines, including the relationship between educational institutions, social environments, identity formation, and inclusion.

Basic knowledge may include familiarity with:

- theories of education and learning,
- socialization processes across the life course,
- the role of family, school, and peer groups in social development,
- inclusive and participatory approaches in education,
- formal, non-formal, and informal learning,
- educational inequalities and reproduction,
- developmental and social psychology perspectives,
- multicultural and intercultural education,
- critical and emancipatory pedagogies.